Standard:

Catholic Charities Disabilities Services (CCDS) will periodically review the need of an individual who resides in a CCDS residence to have a representative payee.

Procedure:

1. Service provision must not be contingent on the Executive Director becoming the individual's representative payee.
2. An agency level review of an individual's need for a representative payee must be made under the following circumstances:
 - a) When an individual moves into a facility;
 - b) During the Money Management Assessment for the individual;
 - c) Upon request of the individual or a party making a request on behalf of the beneficiary;
 - d) When there is a significant change in the individual's physical or mental condition;
 - e) In response to a circumstance that affects the individual's ability to manage his or her benefits.
3. If a determination needs to be made, the Executive Director in consultation with the individual's treatment team must conduct a review to determine whether the appointment of a representative payee to manage the individual's benefits is advisable.
4. This determination must be made within ten (10) business days of the event that requires a determination be made.

The Individual Does Not Have a Representative Payee

1. If the individual does not have a representative payee, and the Executive Director and the treatment team question whether the individual is able to manage his or her benefits, then the individual must be evaluated by a health care professional¹ who will make a determination of whether the individual needs a representative payee.
 - a. If it is determined that the individual needs a representative payee, the Executive Director may apply to become the individual's representative payee.

¹ Health care professional means physician, psychologist, or other qualified medical practitioner whose statement are acceptable to the benefit paying agencies for the purposes of determining the beneficiary's ability to handle his or her benefits.

- b. If the health care professional determines that the individual can manage his or her benefits, then the Executive Director may not apply to become the individual's representative payee.

The Individual Does Have a Representative Payee

1. If the individual does have a representative payee, the Executive Director, in consultation with the individual's planning team, must conduct a review to determine whether there is a continuing need for the appointment of a representative payee for the individual.
 - a. If it is determined that the individual continues to need a representative payee, no further action is necessary.
 - b. If the Executive Director and/or the planning team determine that an individual may no longer require a representative payee, or are unsure, then the individual must be evaluated by a health care professional.
 - i. If the health care professional determines that the individual can manage his or her benefits, then the Executive Director should report this determination to the benefit-paying agency. The Executive Director may not apply to become the individual's representative payee.
 - ii. The Executive Director must notify the benefit-paying agency of any change in representative payee status.
 - iii. The basis for the determination must be documented in the individual's record.
